MESSAGE FROM THE NEW YORK CITY MAYOR'S OFFICE TO COMBAT DOMESTIC VIOLENCE

Home is the one place we all expect to be safe, but each day over 1,000 New Yorkers report an incident of domestic violence. In November 2001, the people of New York City voted to establish the Mayor's Office to Combat Domestic Violence (OCDV) as a permanent office of City government. In addition to developing policies and programs to assist domestic violence victims, OCDV coordinates the direct domestic violence services of 14 City agencies.

Since January 2002, the City has been developing a comprehensive and innovative approach to combat domestic violence and hold batterers accountable. Domestic violence 911 calls have been digitized so that they can be produced more quickly as criminal evidence against batterers. Public housing procedures for victims who are fleeing an abuser have been streamlined, and there has been a 35% increase in emergency shelter beds available to domestic violence victims. The Language Line Program which was first piloted in Queens is now a citywide initiative that equips police precincts with special telephones that allow direct access to interpreters in more than 150 languages. Through these efforts and others, major domestic violence felony crime has decreased 20% citywide over the last five years and continues to be a declining trend. In 2007, we saw a remarkable 36% decline in domestic violence homicides. Help is available 24-hours-a-day to victims by calling 911, 311, or the New York City Domestic Violence Hotline at 1-800-621-HOPE (4673).

The largest collaborative initiative of OCDV to date has been the New York City Family Justice Center Initiative, creating one-stop service centers for domestic violence victims and their children. While visiting these centers victims can receive the following services: civil legal representation, on-site children's room activities, safety planning, assistance with filing police and probation reports, counseling, meeting with a prosecutor, specialized services for the elderly and/or disabled, language interpretation, and voluntary spiritual support. The City's first Center, in partnership with the Kings County District Attorney's Office, opened in July 2005 and has exceeded all expectations receiving nearly 1,000 client visits every month. The New York City Family Justice Center in Brooklyn has become a national model for large urban family justice centers. Due to the success of our first Center in Brooklyn additional Centers will be opening in Queens and in the Bronx.

OCDV is pleased to present the 2008 edition of the City of New York Resource Directory of Domestic Violence Services developed in partnership with the Department of Health and Mental Hygiene and printed with funding from the Avon Foundation. For more information on the initiatives of OCDV and to access our outreach materials, please visit: www.nyc.gov/domesticviolence.

Sincerely,

Yolanda B. Jimenez
Commissioner

MESSAGE FROM THE NEW YORK CITY DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH AND MENTAL HYGIENE

Domestic violence is the leading cause of serious injury to women. It is a situation that can happen to anyone regardless of race, income, age, education, religion, immigration status, or sexual orientation. In New York City, one out of every three women killed each year, is killed by a spouse or partner.

The Health Department is committed to helping all New Yorkers live a life free from domestic violence. A safe environment is essential to one's health and our Take Care New York health agenda includes "Making your home safe and healthy" as one of its 10 steps to living a longer, healthier life. This is a goal we are committed to helping all New Yorker achieve.

The Health Department works with the Mayor's Office to Combat Domestic Violence, City agencies and community-based organizations to develop domestic violence prevention programs, make resources available for survivors and their families, and educate health care providers on how to identify and refer women who are experiencing domestic violence to the help they need.

In partnership with the Mayor's Office to Combat Domestic Violence, the Health Department presents the 2008 edition of the City of New York Resource Directory of Domestic Violence Services. We hope the Directory is a useful resource for New Yorkers, especially those who are affected by or working with domestic violence.

Sincerely,

Thomas R. Frieden, M.D., M.P.H.
Commissioner

INTRODUCTION

The City of New York Resource Directory of Domestic Violence Services provides comprehensive information on services available to domestic violence victims throughout the five boroughs. Information is organized alphabetically by organization name. An index listing domestic violence services by borough, language, population, and service appears at the front of the directory on pages v – xxvii. Please note that many of the organizations listed in the index offer a wide variety of programs and services for different languages and populations. The page numbers listed in the index may refer to a larger organization, please be sure to review the individual listings for programs and services that are available. Pages xxix – xxxii include information on police precincts, courts, district attorney offices, and City hospitals. Commonly used hotlines are listed on the back cover.

Outreach to public and private domestic violence service organizations occurred through mailings, conferences, and other events. Organizations were cross-referenced with listings in more than ten other resource directories. Domestic violence organizations were invited to complete a survey form describing their services. Organizations that submitted completed forms by mail, facsimile, email, or telephone are represented here.

Before referring a domestic violence victim to any of the organizations listed, it is advisable that you first contact the organization to ensure that appropriate services are available. In addition you can contact 311 or the New York City 24-hour, toll-free domestic violence hotline (1-800-621-HOPE) for up-to-date service information and assistance in over 150 languages.

If your organization would like to be included in future editions of the directory or you would like additional copies, please contact the Mayor’s Office to Combat Domestic Violence through the website at: www.nyc.gov/domesticviolence. Please note that an organization’s inclusion in the directory does not imply endorsement by the City of New York. In addition, batterer intervention programs and other services for batterers that are included in this directory should be used with the understanding that such programs and services may or may not help to end the violence. These services should be used with caution and consideration for the safety of domestic violence victims.

The Mayor’s Office to Combat Domestic Violence thanks the AVON Foundation for funding the publication of the directory, the Department of Health and Mental Hygiene for printing the directory, Mei Chen from CityGraphics of the Department of Administrative Services for designing the directory cover, and interns Alexis Arnell, Raquel Lopez, Janice Park, Veronica Piedre, and Roxanne Wiles for assistance in updating the content.
