
Student Goal-Setting
All schools

Following a matter before the Public Employment Relations Board, the UFT has asked that the NYCDOE remind you about the guidelines for student goal-setting.

The expectation of the Quality Review is that teachers set learning goals for their class and for groups or individuals in their class that need extra attention. These do not have to be written down; however, when asked, teachers should be able to articulate their goals for students, and the ways they will know if their students are on a path to meeting them. You may develop structures to implement goal-setting, but you must do so in a way that reasonably allows goal-setting to be completed during the workday, as defined in the collective bargaining agreement, and takes into account the teacher's other duties and responsibilities.
